The Letter From the Editor

By Zeus (Lyla)

Hey there! It's March again! This is a special issue for St. Patrick's Day! It's the luck of the Irish Warmblood day. horses in Ireland are probably very happy with as much apple beer and hay #that they could possibly hope for. Paris

Levy's birthday is March 9. Her age is debatable and therefore undefined. Erin will be either 4 or 14 March 27th, which is also Easter. I am rather sad because no one entered in my last competition. It's very easy to enter, just email your entry to Horsedoctor25@iCloud.com or sign up on the Sign Up sheet in saddle club. This month's competition is to create your dream barn. Is it pink? Are there gargoyles and booby traps? You draw it, and I will pick anonymously! Have a fun read!

Upcoming Events and News

Zeus

Congrats to Lulu and Paris Levy for completing Goldstars IV and III! They are on the road to becoming the next Alberta Einsteins of horse-manship. This April, we have a lot going on. April 8-10 there is a centered riding 3-day clinic. Reserve a horse and RSVP! The first Youth Dressage show is April 24th! It's the Spring Show, there's dressage and jumping and it is a LYDF qualifier, so I would suggest if you are going to Lendon's to SIGN UP and reserve your horse! There are usual saddle clubs every Saturday and we have a lot of fun things coming up.

Another Good St. Patrick's Day Story

By Lyla Andrick

Once upon a time, there was a place called Ireland. In Ireland, there was a large horse ranch where humans trained green horses. Not only were these horse's young, but also they literally had green hair. One horse, Patricia (also the sister of Patrick, the green Irish Trotter horse from last year's story), decided that she wanted to see the rainbow. Few horses had ever seen the rainbow because Ireland was rather cloudy and rainbows were not very common. Patricia trotted out of her pasture one day and found a gold-stoned path that she had never seen before. There was a sign that she had also never seen before. It said: To the Rainbow. Patricia was skeptical, but went down the path anyway. Only an hour later, the path ended and there, sitting with his bum on a black pot, was a little man with a red beard. "A HA! I have found a horse!" he said. Patricia was confused, but used to being ridden; she let the little man climb onto her back. "I want to see the rainbow!" she said. "Then we shall!" said the little man. For hours, Patricia trotted down the gold path. After what seemed like forever, the little man hopped off Patricia's back. He took his little pot and ran off. Patricia looked after him and when she looked up into the sky, there was a big, colorful rainbow spanning the horizon!!

Rebel: The Story of a True Heart

By Lyla Andrick

Previously on Rebel:

"Aww fillies!" Blue whined.
 "Come on girl, let's represent!" Phoenix said.
 "Okay Phea, show us what you can do," Rebel said.

"I want to go first!" Blue said.
 "Fine, go ahead," Rebel said.
 "Let me go first." A voice from behind said.
 "Oh waddaya know! It's our dear friend Lexington!" Blue said.
 "And his girlfriend Regina," Rebel said. "Are you up to a challenge Buster?"

"I'm up to anything, twirp," Lexington said.
 "I challenge you to..." Rebel thought for a moment. "A jump off race, fillies versus colts. After the first round, we eliminate the filly and the colt that come in last. We do the same for the second round. Third round is filly versus colt."

"I'm game!" Blue said.
 "Us too," Phoenix said.
 "Fine, we're in too, but we're gonna bust you're bottoms so bad," Lexington said.

"Okay, on my whinny," Rebel called. "Ready, snort, snort WHINNY!" The horses leaped forwards into a gallop and raced over the eight fallen tree branches serving as their 'natural course.' Lexington finished in the lead. Rebel and Phoenix were tied for second. Blue followed in fourth. Regina fifth and Aphrodite last.

"Okay, Aphrodite and Blue are outta the game!" Rebel called.
 "Doh!" Blue exclaimed.
 "Okay, ready for round two!" The horses lined up and waited for Rebel's call. "Snort, snort, WHINNY!" The horses shot off and soared over the jumps. Rebel and Lexington tied for first. Phoenix finished third and Regina last.

"Okay...um...that was definitely a tie for first guys, I say you do a jump off...half the course," Regina said.
 "Okay," Rebel said. He and Lexington burst off and cleared all four jumps. Rebel finished a neck in front of Lexington.

"I won!" Rebel exclaimed. Lexington trotted away from the group with Regina following close behind.

The One and Only Bailey

By Paris Levy

Hi guys, it's me, Bailey, and I'm here to wish my good, little (I mean not so little now) rider a happy birthday. For she turned 10 on March 9th!!!!!!! So if you see her around the barn anytime soon, please wish her a happy birthday. Now it's time for one Bailey joke.

Q: Who is the pony with the black frilly mane and a big fat belly.

The Scoop

By Lula Langdon

Horses in the snow, joy in the air! Is there any better season than winter? This month's scoop is going to be full of everything you want to know!

Wild horses? No way!

There is only one true wild horse and that is the Przewalski's horse. They are extinct in their hometown of Mongolia, but they still live on in zoos across the globe. Now one question you might have could be about the wild mustangs of the west. Long ago quite a few of the settler's ponies ran away to be free, and that is how the wild horses in the United States originated.

Horses of a feather stick together!

Some draft horses such as the Percheron, Shire, and Clydesdale have "feathers" on their feet. "Feathers" is a term used for the long hair surrounding the horse's
